

PRESS RELEASE 22-04-2014. ROMANIAN POLICE PROHIBITS THE USAGE OF THE HUNGARIAN LANGUAGE.

The Romanian police demanded the citizens of Marosvásárhely (Romanian : Tirgu Mures) to remove bilingual street signs from their houses.

Although some of these street signs have been placed by the inhabitants themselves, others are still from the period in which this city belonged to the Autonomous Hungarian Province.

According to the summation, which has been signed by the chief of the Police Valentin Constantin Bretfelean, people who don't remove these street signs will be penalized with the amount of 50.000 Ron. (£ 8063 or € 11302). The fine is based on the alleged violation of construction regulations.

Till now the police only sent these summation for bilingual signs, which include the Hungarian language. not even one summation has been sent for monolingual signs

Romania ratified the European Charta of regional languages as well as the Strasbourg treaty for the protection of national minorities in order to become member of the European Union and the NATO. This treaty protects the autonomous Hungarian language and encourages its usage in public. Netherlands signed this treaty for its autonomous Frisian minority.
